SHE performance

2004 Total Recordable Incident Rate

Business environment

- Low inflation and interest rate environment prevailed
- This resulted in strong consumer-driven demand, such as retail, housing and automotive
- Commodity prices including oil remained high, but strong currency restricted inflationary pressures
- The local manufacturing industry is progressively addressing the global competitive environment through productivity measures, cost cutting, aggressive purchasing policies and product rationalisation
- Opportunities for sales price adjustments ahead of cost increases diminished
- Certain raw materials became scarce and prices fluctuated and increased sharply

Chemical industry

- Global industry no benchmark for AECI; we are portfolio of customer focused specialty product and service solutions businesses, operating in global and regional niche markets
- Global industry remains in better shape with improved demand and commodity prices
- Prolonged high cost of natural gas and roller coaster crude oil prices and supply and demand imbalances play havoc with results
- China is an increasing factor in demand and supply for a vast range of products, and an investment base for multinationals
